First Order of Business – Coordinator searches

1) Art Grants

- Art Grants department is (I believe) still looking for a new co-coordinator to take over for O Man

Discussion:

O-Man – Yes we are. Have some people interested, are trying to look at folks that have art grant coord experience, but most interested folks don't have that. Hoping to have it in place by Fall. They're welcoming suggestions if anyone has them. Please speak to me or St. Greg (other co-coord for Art Grants).

Virgin Andy – What's the best way to reach out to Art grants team?

O-Man – artgrantslead@playadelfuego.com; that goes directly to both co-coords

2) Gate

- Looking for a coordinator to train to replace Smartie Martie, as well as an assistant coordinator

3) Stage?

- Any information on whether or not we have a Stage coordinator still? No AB report or word of one has been submitted... (Solved and addressed in next PC meeting; see agenda/minutes from March '16.)

Discussion:

Virgin Andy – Had a talk with MmmBobby (Stage coord) and Jen Dublin; he seemed very frustrated after last burn b/c of all the work he had to do to keep the stage running, and though he sounded like he was game to continue as coord for Stage might be looking for some help.

Jen Dublin – Yes; similar recollection of the conversation. He kept things going but was very tired/frustrated by the end of the weekend. Help would be good.

O-Man – Agrees that he should have help. It may seem like a simple job but it's a lot of oversight and work, and he should definitely have a co-coordinator. Also because there are sometimes things like work and family emergencies that can be problematic if there's no one else on the lead team. A co-coordinator can be really key to making the job successful.

4) Fire conclave?

- Any information on whether or not we have a Fire conclave coordinator still? No AB report or word of one has been submitted... (Solved and addressed in next PC meeting; see agenda/minutes from March '16.)

Second Order of Business – After Burn reports

1) Drum Conclave – Submitted by Moose

- The Good: Had a decent core of drummers to keep the rhythm. Kept the burn time to about a couple hours, which is reasonable for how long I can play straight and let others take shifts in and out. Nobody came up to me while drumming and told me I had to move, and all the musicians stayed together. Side circles make it harder for everyone.
- The Bad: Didn't think about teaching classes. Gonna do that this year. See if I can't get us all synced up on 3 or 4 specific rhythms to keep everyone together.
- Changes requested: Can I get a co-coordinator to help me manage the base rhythm at the burn and set up the classes? I am great at making lots of noise you wanna dance too, but I suck at logistics. I was thinking Rod Gnarley aka Hippee since he has both dedicated himself to this community and to that drum circle a many a times through the years, and he has proven himself a good hippee wrangler.

2) Ticketing/Gate – Submitted by Smartie Martie

- The Good
 - ~The weather for setup and breakdown was fabulous
 - ~DPW crew was awesome for having trucks available for hauling all the Gate gear up to the Gate on Wednesday afternoon
 - ~The Front Gate structure was setup by Wednesday evening
 - ~I had lots of help from the early arrival volunteers and DPW for Gate
 - ~All the volunteers who showed up rock it out and worked hard
 - ~The charging station at Front Gate was successful with the volunteers
 - ~One of the GOD's created a new wristband log sheet, for the volunteers to fill out at the end of the shift. The wristband log was easier and understandable for the volunteers to fill out
 - ~The bacon deliveries was successful on Saturday morning
 - ~The volunteers seemed to enjoy the snacks and coffee stuff
 - ~All of the GOD shifts were finally all filled, I did not have to work 3 GOD shifts this burn
 - ~Participants were not parking overnight in the temporary parking lot, the extra signage help inform participants

~The Gate has a new onsite Assistant Coordinator Leah Loaf

~The Gate FAQ and Volunteer shift books continue to be useful for all the volunteers at the Gates

~Wristband charts were for other departments for clarification of all the different wristbands

- The Bad

~A medical burner WITHOUT a ticket was let in against Ticketing Volunteers say by another medical coordinator(?). She stated that this unbanded person had important medical supplies and had to get inside. Since the waiver team was very thorough, they filed the waiver that person said she filled out. She stated that her ticket was inside and no one was able to find the person who was holding it. And they didn't want to wait. Sorry about your luck, No one is allowed to go inside the event without signing a waiver, presenting a ticket and ID at Ticketing.

~The next day the same Coordinator(?) came up with a ticket number written down on a piece of paper and had the scanner person key it in. Stating it was a valid ticket, then behind Ticketing volunteer's back and took a band off the roll while, he was applying a band to a burner. The person who ticket that was, was not present. She took the band back through the gate. Sorry about your luck, No one is allowed to go inside the event without signing a waiver, presenting a ticket and ID at Ticketing.

~That same day, a ranger didn't have a ticket at the gate. Again another ranger insisted that he could come in. While Ticketing Volunteers insisting he couldn't, a Parking Coordinator rode up and said it was ok. They then DROVE in the front gate with his car and not through the back gate. We have no knowledge if that ranger ever filled out a waiver or even came back up to the gate with a ticket later Sorry about your luck, No one is allowed to go inside the event without signing a waiver, presenting a ticket and ID at Ticketing.

~Hot Dog deciding to close the back Gate on Sunday, and removing volunteer online sign ups. The back Gate needs to have volunteers at the entrance point checking wristbands and Greeting participants as they come and go from the event. It is a liability issue if no one is at the back entrance. If a person sneaks in and has an unfortunate situation happen, it's not good for PDF. I don't think we want a bunch of people sneaking in the back gate on Sunday, it creates problems for participants, Rangers, Medics, BOD and The Vets. We had this problem before when no one was place at the back gate, which is why Greeters was placed at the back gate entrance

~The back lot was closed on Friday evening, due to a bad thunderstorm, which created a carry in only situation

~Participants confused with tickets transferred due to no name change on the transferred tickets, caused some problems for Ticketing volunteers

- ~Participants misinformed about how spotty the internet/cell phone service. Participants being mad about not being able to download their ticket from his or her cell phone and have to drive back into town to download their ticket
- ~On Thursday afternoon, Golf cart delivery driver almost hit the Ticketing structure and participants waiting in line to check in
- ~Very late delivery of the golf carts on Thursday afternoon
- ~Bacon deliveries were a late start on Sunday morning, and were made in the early afternoon, due to GOD passed out and unresponsive on the radio
- ~On Saturday evening from 11:00 PM to about 1:00 AM, the drunk neighbors of the property, were having target practice with their very loud guns, which was caused some concern. Pineapple talked to the neighbors several times and the cops even went to this property. Eventually, the shooting stopped and the neighbors joined the The Vets around the fire drinking some beers
- ~The Vets did not send me a copy of the Vets guest wristbands ahead of time. Previously, The Vets sent me a copy of their wristband, so we can incorporate their wristband in the community wristband chart for all the different types of wristbands at PDF.
- ~A continuing trend NO SHOW volunteers, late night on Thursday, Friday and all day Sunday.
- ~Waited a really long time for my reimbursement check for items purchased for PDF, I did play a prank on Patty though this time...

- The Ugly
I don't like the ugly.....
- Improvements
 - ~Adding extra sign up shifts on Thursday.
 - ~Handmade pony pendants for volunteers.
 - ~Banners for Greeters Tent, and Ticketing Tent
 - ~Two banners, one at the front Gate entrance and one at the back Gate entrance to Welcome Community Members to Playa del Fuego
 - ~Decorate drinking containers with vinyl lettering for volunteers
 - ~Give the clipboards a face-lift, they look kinda sloppy
 - ~Have garlynn for inside of the Ticketing tent for a more festive feel
 - ~More communication with other Departments about gate topics
 - ~Wristband Guides for Theme Camps with bars, if Theme Camp requests one.
 - ~The majority of items being purchased will be online orders.

- Final Thoughts
 - The Gate is always looking for some awesome volunteers to take on more responsibility. We are currently looking for an additional Coordinator (training my replacement), Assistant Coordinator, GOD's, and Shift Leads. If anyone is interested please send an email to: gate-lead@playadelfuego.org
 - Thank you everybody in the community who volunteers, brings art, and sets up a Theme Camp, to help bring PDF together every Fall and Spring
 - Overall every burn is different and poses new challenges, which I learn and grow from each one. I love each and every burn in its own special way

Discussion:

Smartie Martie – Reiterates how people cannot barge through the gate without going through the ticketing process (for a myriad of reasons).

Yeti – You need ID, waiver, and a ticket to get in. People have taken liberties in the past because of perceived personal authority or whatever. This shouldn't happen. Even though some departments may be considered more "high octane" b/c of their job, that shouldn't trump anyone going through the (very simple) gate process. We all have months to get prepared. If you don't have ID, ticket, and sign a waiver you can't get into the event.

Owsla – I have two possible suggestions. One addresses people who may have the perception that they're important enough to bend the rules of Gate. Something that might be worth it is to write an email directly to the coord list; I know it's not just coords who are taking liberties, but an email to the coord list and having coords help disseminate this information again may help with certain volunteers who think they can bend gate rules b/c they're volunteers.

The other thing is, with regards to medical personnel and others who might be considered essential personnel (i.e., people who buy reserve tickets), would it be a good idea to have a list of reserve ticket buyers – which should be set at least 4 weeks before the burn – up at the gate so that just in case someone forgets a printout there's still a copy of their ticket for them to get entry with? I understand that people should be able to bring a piece of paper with them, but shit happens and on the occasion that something goes wrong with that it seems like a very easy thing to have reserve ticket records at the Gate.

Yeti – One of the reasons I forgot to mention earlier with the problem of people barging through the Gate is that it's a liability issue. Also some coords buy their department's reserves outright and then distribute them, so we don't always have a list of all the actual volunteers names who are getting reserve tickets.

Aned – We don't want to necessarily be bending the rules per se, but we should be reasonable in what we're doing. If there are people who come to the event and bust their ass working, we don't want to give them static on a technicality. So that idea about having copies of reserve tickets at the gate, that might be a really good thing because we don't want it to be a bigger pain in the ass for people who are really working hard for the event.

Fritz – As far as the ID... IDs are becoming more required at some events and they didn't used to be as required, and the type of IDs are starting to become more specific. I'm not sure what the requirements of ID are for us. In terms of our needs, if somebody does something wrong we just need a way to know who that was. In the case of people that we all know for a long time – long time PDFers – if for whatever reason they don't have a driver's license anymore or they don't have a passport or they don't have some government ID, could we make our own IDs? Like a PDF ID? It's fair to charge $10 so it's not free. So people would have photo ID for PDF.

Owsla – Let me stop you; if you have a proposal then write it up and submit it to the agenda and we'll talk about it next meeting. For now I'd like to keep to this meeting's agenda and stay on the After Burn reports.

Karnak – No ID, no waiver, no ticket, no entry! This is basic, this has been going on for years. If you can't get that figured out, there's a problem. As a coord the first thing you should figure out with your team is your tickets. Hand them out before you get there. If you're a shit-show when you get there, don't make it another department's problem. We do our best at the gate and help where we can, but this is basic stuff.

Smartie Martie – We do keep a copy of the reserve ticket list at the Gate, but there are coords who purchase bulk tickets in their name and if they don't assign a person/name to those tickets then we don't have any extra information. I can't do anything about it if someone claims to be a reserve ticket recipient but there's no record of it and they didn't bring their ticket (or weren't given one by their coord). This is available to the GODs, people have my number in case I'm off-site for a short time doing errands for the burn, but people need to contact me (and not just break gate rules). If someone wants to do something with IDs then go for it but I'm not going to take it on as Gate. People should coordinate with their volunteers; that's their job.

Owsla – In terms of being flexible at the Gate, I agree with that but that should be at the discretion of the coordinators who are working the Gate, and not just any coordinator that wants to get things done or their people in.

Aned – I appreciate what Martie is saying but think that a double redundant system – list at the gate, for example – could be helpful to cover things.

Discussion:

Owsla – Okay, so the coords for Parking decided they don't want to bother with screen-printing or customizing their own bandanas. That's perfectly understandable but it leads us back to the original conversation then about cost, which was put on hold specifically because of the idea that we'd be doing the screening this cycle. I can appreciate that they don't actually want to do the screen printing now that they've actually thought about what it would really entail and of course that's fine, but there are other ways to have bandanas and to somehow have them personalized (or have another thing that's personalized) without going through the cost of buying commercially-printed bandanas every cycle, and that goes also for the Gate/Greeters.

So what I'm hearing from Parking is basically two-fold. One is that they want their volunteers to have something cool, and the other is that the bandanas themselves are actually functional to the job and used against dust, etc. So commercially-printed bandanas is one way to satisfy this, but it's also rather expensive and in the long run I think it's also wasteful because it gives the idea that it's yearly throw-away swag, not something that you use and keep and that becomes special to you (and yeah after some time if it really wears out then sure you can get another one). There's just a difference in attitude between handing something out when needed as a replacement, and just handing it out as a matter of course every single burn. The cost is not insignificant. Can we talk about other options such as purchasing plain bandanas and personalizing them with a special stencil and sharpies, or getting pins which are much cheaper and can be special every burn, or other options? It seems there are other ways to satisfy those needs without it being so wasteful.

2E – As far as screen-printing on site, Parking and Greeters are very busy before the gate opens and we just don't have time for that.

Owsla – That's fine and no one is trying to force you to do that, but that's just what you guys told us that you were going to do (to address the cost issue).

2E – On the flip side of it, we took a look and have been able to get the cost of the personalized bandanas down. In reality I'm open to suggestions but we're not talking of an extreme amount of money for something that people really do enjoy. People really like getting these bandanas.

Owsla – Right but I don't know if people enjoying getting something justifies paying for commercially-printed bandanas. I hear what you're saying but...

2E – But we print 600-some WWW guides and the difference in cost is what? 50 cents per unit? It's just something to look at in comparison. I know people who do still have their bandanas. It's a thank you for the volunteers who come help us. Without the volunteers it would really suck.

Yeti – At Walmart or someplace you can get bandanas for way cheaper. If it were me I'd get the cheap ones and do something personal to them myself but...

Owsla – I do hear what you're saying about people liking things and I do think that having incentives is nice, but what I'm asking about and what I'd like to have considered is the idea that it's not just a replaceable thing that you're giving out every cycle. Like you said you knew people who still had theirs; that's great and they should bring it back and use it again every time so they don't just keep getting one after the other after the other. So the idea was that something like a pin, like we make for Participation Station, is much lower cost, it can be personalized per burn... there's just other ways to reduce the cost of this and not go through a commercial printer and still satisfy what you want to have done, which is to both have something functional for people who need it and also have something that is a little special take-home.

Alfred – We originally budgeted for $280 for 80 bandanas for each department, we got the cost to $290 for 80 bandanas for both departments. So each department is now at $145.45. So if you're going off the old numbers, we got the cost way down. That's 80 for each department. A compromise that could be an option is that maybe we only get bandanas yearly instead of every cycle and if you don't get it in spring you get it in fall, but there's other ways to do it. Also FYI you say commercially-printed but this is a mom-and-pop operation that we have a personal relationship with. So we've reduced the cost and the bandanas are also best for the job.

Fritz – Parking is one of the harder jobs to get people to do, and Rangers get hats and shirts and sure they have a hard job too that requires training. But the specialized bandanas are raising the camaraderie value just as the hats and tshirts do with the Rangers. It gives an identity and is not just swag but also kinsmanship. If you look at it that way versus what the Rangers have, it's not that expensive. And Parking is worthy of that.

Also I don't know if you all know there's a lot of them leftover in the shed. There's like 30-40 yellow ones and 20-30 orange ones... there's a lot of those left that went to the shed. A bit of a supply left to start with.

Virgin Andy – T-shirts can be done for $5.50 a piece and Alfred's gotten the price down really low, so that's just a comparison point there with the Rangers. Also what's the price to get pins made? And the bandanas are easier to spot in the field.

Princess Giggles – Buttons are $200 for 500 buttons.

Owsla – Just to be clear, I'm not saying that bandanas can't/shouldn't happen. What I'm saying is the personally printed ones seems to be a larger expense than needed. Especially if we have lots of leftovers that are printed with a specific cycle/burn... the implication there is that they're not going to be used or handed out next year. If you make the comparison with what the Rangers have, the big difference there – and this is something I would love to see happen with Parking and Greeters and the bandanas – is that the Rangers print out t-shirts and hats, and a volunteer gets one; not one every burn/cycle, just one. So the Rangers aren't printing out t-shirts and hats every cycle or budgeting every cycle or having an individual t-shirt every cycle, they're printing them so a person gets one and they keep it and bring it back and keep using it over again.

With the bandanas and being visible in the field and having that piece of cloth as a utilitarian dust guard that's great. But it seems like something we could do with plain bandanas and a stencil and a sharpie if people want to individualize them, and then the pin idea was essentially in addition to a plain bandana, which are very cheap. But the idea with people bringing back their bandanas and using them again, I don't see why we're not doing that.

Virgin Andy – The fact that they're left over means that they're not getting all used every cycle. And the cost doesn't seem that much different if we're talking $200 for pins plus a cheap bandana.

Owsla – But you wouldn't be making that many pins. Parking is doing 80 bandanas, Greeters are doing 80 bandanas... not 500. It's $200 for 500 pins.

Alfred – I agree we can totally hand out the old bandanas first. They are not burn-cycle specific, they just say Greeters or Parking and Playa del Fuego. I did that specifically. I'm not unreasonable about it but I'm cutting costs where I can see cutting costs. Also I do agree it's a badge of honor and not just a throw-away item.

Owsla – Let me ask you for Greeters, and also 2E for Parking, would it be possible to let people know when you're handing them out that this is your one and that they need to keep it and bring it back ?

Alfred – Oh totally. That's not an issue. I have no problem with that.

2E – Yeah I guess we could do that.

Princess Giggles – And idea for the bandanas to help with the idea that you know this is the one you're getting is to have a little section where you write your name and the date you received it. So it shows the year you were initiated into the brotherhood of Parking/Greeting.

Owsla – General reminder that next month is the last month to receive budget proposals for spring cycle. Coords please be sure to get your budgets in, and everyone please encourage your coord friends to do so!

Fourth Order of Business – Announcements and reminders

1) Ticket sales!

- Round 1 - Sunday, February 28th, NOON
- Round 2 - Wednesday, March 16, 9 PM
- Reserves open - Sunday, March 27
- Reserves close - Tuesday, April 26 (4 weeks before PDF)

Owsla – Please spread the word that those reserve ticket dates are hard and so people need to buy their reserve tickets within that window.

2) Upcoming PC meeting schedule

- March 13 (Sun) – LAST CALL for Spring 2016 budgets/proposals
- April 9 (Sat) – final votes and planning for spring burn
- May – no meeting unless emergency

Final discussion:

Ursula – I don't see the ticket dates on the PONY yet; are they posted yet?

Owsla – They were supposed to be posted by now onto the website; I'm not sure if they are but if they didn't get posted then I can do it myself later today. Hatter said he was going to get to it but he may not of yet.

Princess Giggles – It is very unlikely that I will be attending this PDF, but I do have things that need to be on-site. So I won't be buying any tickets but I'm happy to bring my ID and sign a waiver for the time I'll be on site delivering the things that Jordan will need to run Participation Station while I'm away.

Aned – Where can I find the budget proposals? Are they on the PONY or on the website...?

Owsla – Budget proposals are all in the agendas and minutes of the PC meetings, so those that have been submitted for this month are in the agenda for this month. And if you want to look at past meetings/burns you can go to the PC Docs section of the main website and see past budgets; probably looking at the minutes of meetings are better than the agendas because in the minutes are the budgets as they actually passed (in case of modification).

Diana Smiles – Ticket sales are not yet showing (I just pulled up the website). Also Princess, if you want to get me that stuff then I'm happy to bring it on-site for you.

Karnak – I'm going to put together an art grant proposal for large, reusable signage. If you want a large, reusable sign please send me a note so I can add it to the budget; I will be submitting the budget on time tomorrow through Art Grants.

O-Man – We've been devising a similar plan in regards to that, so let's coordinate.

2E – There aren't any BOD meeting minutes up since October of last year; have they been doing their monthly meetings?

Owsla – I'm pretty sure they have.

Fritz – Just FYI the venue has another event happening the same weekend as the Firefly music festival, it will be called RaidFest. The organizers asked me to ask PDF if we wanted to rent any of our equipment to them.

Owsla – Wow that's a whole different topic for discussion, so either add that to next month's agenda or start a topic on the PONY about it.

Meeting closed at 1:02 pm
